Williams' journey began in a working-class neighborhood in New York City. Growing up, he was captivated by the sounds of doo-wop and R&B that filled the airwaves. At the age of 16, he joined a local karaoke group and quickly discovered his natural talent for singing. His soulful voice and charismatic stage presence soon won over audiences, and before long, he was performing at local clubs and events.

In 1995, Williams' life took a dramatic turn when he was invited to audition for the Platters. The Platters were one of the most successful vocal groups of all time, known for their timeless hits like "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" and "Only You." Williams passed the audition with flying colors, and soon found himself on stage with the legendary group, performing to sold-out audiences around the world.

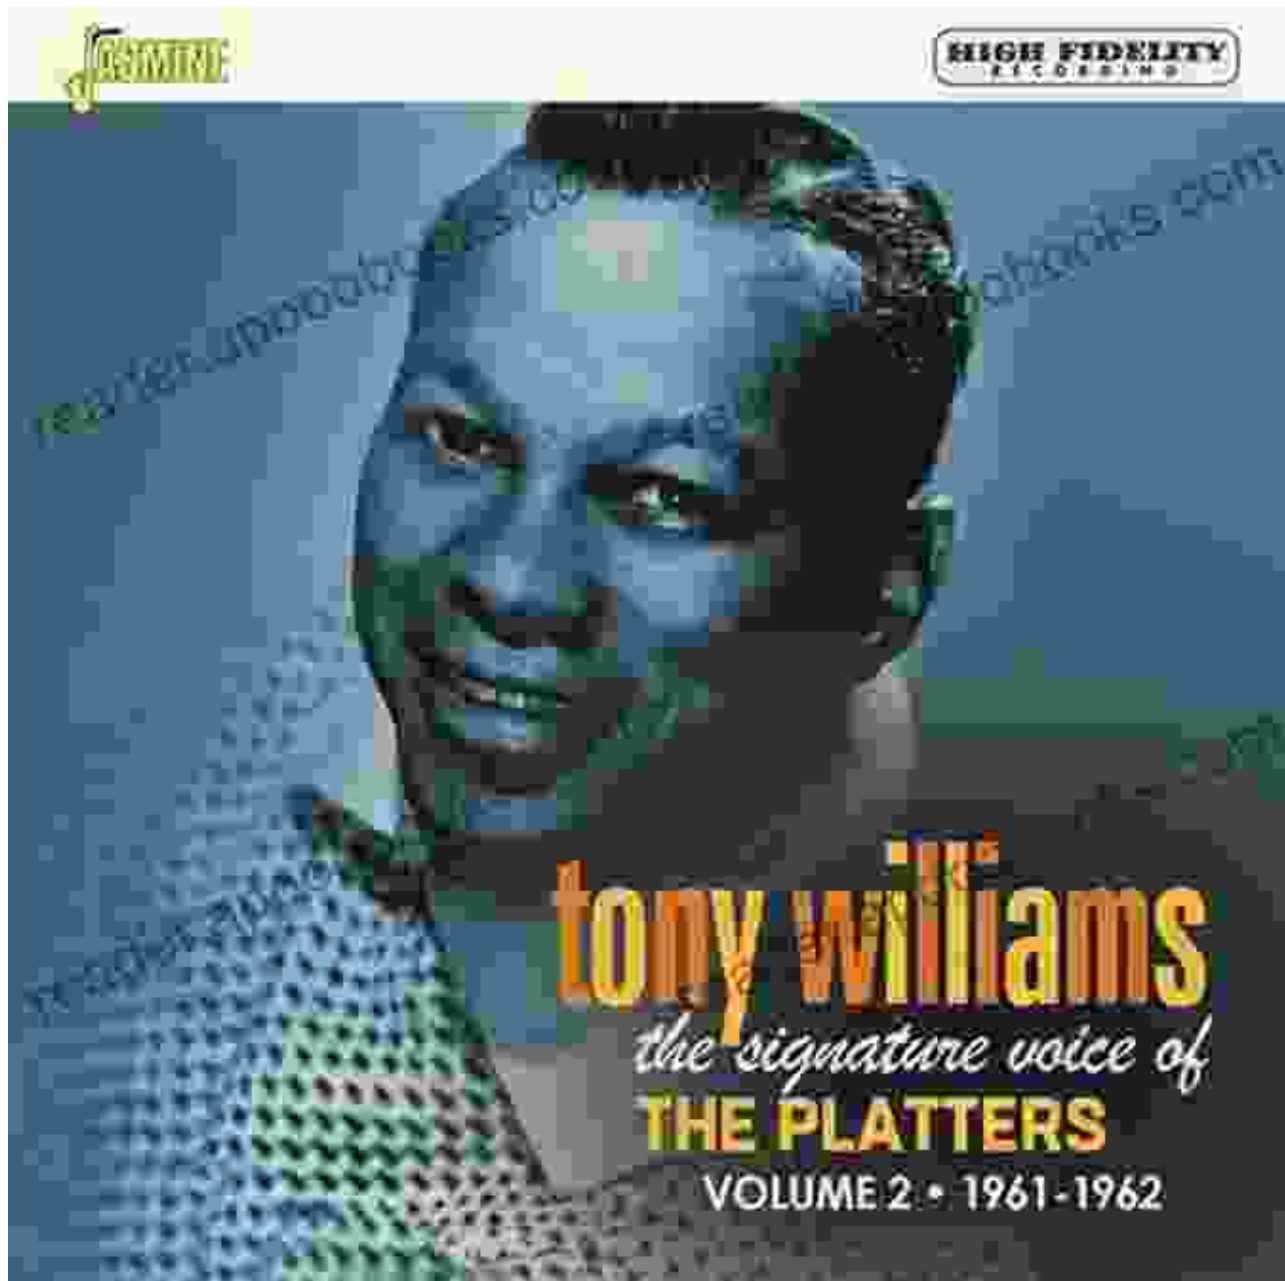

For over two decades, Williams toured with the Platters, singing to millions of fans. He shared the stage with some of the biggest names in music, including Tony Bennett, Frank Sinatra, and Aretha Franklin. He also performed at prestigious venues such as the Hollywood Bowl and Carnegie Hall.

However, despite his success with the Platters, Williams' journey was not without its challenges. He faced personal struggles, including addiction and divorce. But through it all, he never lost his love of music. In 2016, he left the Platters to pursue a solo career, and he has since released several successful albums.
