The book is divided into four parts, each of which focuses on a different aspect of local musical dynamics.

- Part 1 examines the role of music in local communities, exploring how music was used to create a sense of place and identity.
- Part 2 examines the role of music in local politics, exploring how music was used to mobilize support for political causes.
- Part 3 examines the role of music in local cultural life, exploring how music was used to express and celebrate local traditions.

- Part 4 examines the role of music in local wartime experiences, exploring how music was used to cope with the challenges of war and to commemorate the sacrifices of those who fought.

The book draws on a wide range of sources, including archival documents, oral histories, and musical recordings, to provide a rich and detailed account of the local dynamics of music in the century to World War II.
