The Titanic was the largest ship afloat at the time of her sinking, and her loss sent shockwaves around the world. The disaster has been the subject of numerous books, films, and other works of art, and continues to fascinate people to this day.

This book is a comprehensive guide to the history of the RMS Titanic, from its construction to its fateful voyage. It includes poetry, music, and stories that bring the tragedy to life.

The Construction of the RMS Titanic

The RMS Titanic was built by the Harland and Wolff shipyard in Belfast, Ireland. She was launched on May 31, 1911, and was the largest ship afloat at the time of her completion. The Titanic was a marvel of engineering, and her design was considered to be unsinkable.

The ship was divided into three classes: first class, second class, and third class. First class passengers had access to the most luxurious accommodations, including private cabins, a dining room, and a smoking room. Second class passengers had access to more modest accommodations, but they still had access to a dining room and a smoking room. Third class passengers had the most basic accommodations, and they were housed in large dormitories.

The Titanic was also equipped with a variety of amenities, including a swimming pool, a gymnasium, and a library. She was also the first ship to have a Marconi wireless telegraph system, which allowed her to communicate with other ships and with land-based stations.

The Maiden Voyage of the RMS Titanic

The RMS Titanic set sail on her maiden voyage from Southampton to New York City on April 10, 1912. The ship was carrying over 2,200 passengers and crew, and she was commanded by Captain Edward Smith.

The voyage began smoothly, and the Titanic steamed across the Atlantic Ocean without incident. However, on the night of April 14–15, the ship struck an iceberg in the North Atlantic Ocean. The iceberg tore a hole in the Titanic's hull, and the ship began to sink.

The sinking of the Titanic was a chaotic and tragic event. Many passengers and crew members were trapped in the ship's compartments as it sank. Others jumped overboard into the freezing cold water.

The RMS Titanic sank in less than three hours, and over 1,500 people died. The disaster was a shock to the world, and it led to new regulations for passenger ships.
